Title: The Floyd family comes full circle in Alaska baseball

Publication Date: June 28, 2017

Summary: Inside Mulcahy Stadium, the sounds of Alabama's 'Dixieland Delight' echo across the field. The June sun radiates off the artificial-turf infield, where Anchorage Bucs infielder Will Floyd, fresh off his freshman season in junior college, takes swings in the batter's box. He's taking pitches in the same spot, and for the same team, his father Pat did a quarter century ago. Will is a third-generation Floyd — his grandfather is Kodiak legend Joe Floyd — looking to make his mark on Alaska baseball.

Pat was an undrafted local player, just like his son Will who hit .297 as a freshman for American River College in California this spring.
